Days of Mindfulness and Memory

By: Rabbi Tracy Nathan

One of the most significant moments for me of my year living in Israel was the siren that sounded for two minutes on Yom Hashoah, calling each Jew in Israel to stop and stand in silence. I had been walking, and as I stood, I observed others pulling their cars over and stepping out of them to stand in mindful attention. Each year, people throughout the country stop shopping or stand in silence in their offices. It is a moment that unites the nation, a moment of shared attention, mindfulness, and memory.

Attention, mindfulness, and memory shape the period from Pesach to Shavuot. These are the weeks of Sefirat Ha-Omer, the Counting of the Omer, in which we count the days from Pesach to Shavuot, from the barley harvest to the wheat harvest, from freedom to responsibility.

These are also the days in which we collectively remember suffering and loss, first on Yom Hashoah and then on Yom Hazikaron, Israel's Remembrance Day for Fallen Soldiers and Victims of Terror. Yom Hazikaron shares the ritual of the siren and the stillness. Before leading into Yom Ha'atzma'ut, Israel's Independence Day, each individual and family brings to mind the costly personal and communal sacrifices that freedom is built upon.

Along the way, Sefirat Ha-Omer, grounds us in this journey punctuated with memories that sometimes make us cry and sometimes make us sing with joy. In Leviticus 23:15-16, the Torah tells us: “And from the day on which you bring the sheaf of elevation offering – the day after the sabbath – you shall count off seven weeks. They must be complete; you must count until the day after the seventh week – fifty days; then you shall bring an offering of new grain to the Lord.”

Since the mitzvah mentions seven full weeks but also fifty days, when we say the formula for counting, we count both weeks and days (“Today is the X day, which is Y weeks and Z days of the Omer.”). One says a blessing for Sefirat Ha-Omer each night before counting, and if one forgets a day, it has consequences for the fullness of one's ritual counting. If one forgets but remembers before dark the next day, one may count but without a blessing, and then one resumes the blessing and counting the next night. If, however, one forgets one full day, one still may count, but without a blessing for the remainder of the Sefirah period.

The counting ritual of Sefirat Ha-Omer teaches us that we need to be mindful of each day. As the verse in Psalms notes: “Teach us to number our days so that we may gain a heart of wisdom” (Psalm 90:12). Sefirat Ha-Omer helps us become aware of the blessings of each day, to strive towards the goal of receiving the Torah anew, and above all, to make each day count.

Like the sirens of our days of remembrance, the call to count asks us to take a few moments in each day to call to mind what is most important in life. It asks us to remember that freedom demands something from each one of us and calls on us to reflect on how our lives are living up to that commitment to making the world a place of freedom and justice for all.

Marks Remarks: Seder with 60 of My Closest Friends

By Mark Frydenberg

Many people told me what a wonderful time they had at our community second Seder on the Second Night of Passover. Marilyn, Genevieve, Arthur, Marge, Dina, Helen and Andrea worked hard cooking and preparing the meal. (Thanks, it was wonderful!) Marilyn,

Andrea, and I did lots of shopping, and Rabbi Nathan helped out before the holiday overseeing the kashering of the kitchen. Our Seder ceremony included lots of familiar songs, a few new ones, group readings, the new version of the Maxwell House Hagaddah, and enough verses of Dayenu to celebrate the holiday in a way that felt like home. We welcomed several first time visitors to our community who heard about the Seder and the Synagogue and came to “try us out.” Please come back! Many of you brought your Seder plates, Kiddush cups, matzah boxes, and cups for Elijah and Miriam to decorate your tables, and add to the joy and beauty of the holiday. Five kids found the Afikomens hidden around the room. You sang. And after dinner, the sounds of the Holy One prevailing over the Angel of Death and the shochet, an ox, water, fire, a stick, dog, cat, and a little goat filled the room. Thanks for coming, and singing, and reading, and eating, and helping, and talking to each other to create the community that is Temple Beth Israel. We couldn’t have done it without you.

Now the journey continues from freedom to redemption, as we look forward to celebrating Shavuot together in June. Please join us for our early evening of Study on Tuesday, June 7, at 7 pm, when Rabbi Nathan and I will each be teaching before evening services to welcome the holiday. There will be plenty of dairy snacks to enjoy. We also especially encourage you to come to services on the first morning of Shavuot at 8 am, Wednesday June 8, so we can stand together as if we were at Sinai and receive the Ten Commandments, and again on Thursday June 9 at 7 am, for the morning service and Yizkor. You can make the minyan. We’re also planning to hold our monthly Shabbat evening dinners and services throughout the summer. Watch the newsletter for upcoming details.

There's a Minyan Here Tonight

By: Caroline Nudelman

I borrowed the title of this piece from an old folk/gospel tune, There's a Meetin' Here Tonight which I heard the Limelighters sing many times during recent WBGH fund raisers. The song goes,

*There's a meetin' here tonight
 There's a meetin' here tonight
 I know you by your friendly face
 There's a meetin' here tonight*

As many of you know, I recently lost my father after his battle with dementia. As part of my home shiva ritual, I requested shiva minyans. This wonderful community obliged and the magic of prayer and community was in my living room for three nights. Many thanks to Rabbi Nathan for both leading a minyan and helping to organize the minyan leaders as well as to Bruce Trager and Joseph Weintraub for leading. Many thanks also go to the TBI community for presence and support to make the minyans.

After my Mom's passing in 2003, I started exploring what it means to say Kaddish. I bought Anita Diamant's book, Saying Kaddish and looked for information on the web. I found one source which talked about the comforting rhythm of the words, Yiskadal v'yiskadash, etc. as they flow from the lips. I was also struck by the idea that the Mourner's Kaddish is not a prayer for the dead, but rather exalts G-d.

I've been tutoring and teaching adults Hebrew for approximately five years. In my reading fluency classes, adults often request to learn to read the Mourner's Kaddish. My classes most often are full of middle agers who have started observing yahrtzeits or are anticipating the death of a loved one such as a parent. We work on each line. I have my students repeat the words which are in Aramaic and are difficult to get our western tongues around each word. Yiskadal, v'yiskadash shemei rabah, often comes easily. The difficulty starts with the next phrase B'almah divrah chirusei v'yamlich malchusei. As I comfort and encourage my students to go over these phrases, I explain that variations of this prayer appear in the siddur after each section of the service is completed.

The first time a question arose asking why we have such a prayer, I thought about it. It's like the Kaddish is a punctuation mark which lets the community know that one part of the service has ended and another is about to begin. Or as one student pointed out recently, "it gives those who are slower readers a chance to catch up." But then I made the connection to why Kaddish is recited after someone has passed. The prayer doesn't speak about mourning; it doesn't talk about helping the neshama or soul of the deceased go to a new level (an explanation often given to one of the reasons for reciting this prayer); it's a rhythmic prayer in Aramaic (the common language of the Biblical era) which was written in that language so all would know the words and be able to recite it. But then I made the connection between the punctuation of a Reader's Kaddish or Kaddish Shalem makes during the service and the Mourner's Kaddish. Perhaps the Mourner's Kaddish is no more than a punctuation on a person's life. It's a way to frame the transition of living in the body to living in a different realm. If you believe the teaching that there are a finite number of souls in the universe and we are only visitors in our bodies, than the Mourner's Kaddish is the perfect escort for the soul of a loved one helping it leave the body and move onto another world.

Even if you don't subscribe to an afterlife in any form, the Kaddish marks the life of the one who has passed. It's the exclamation point that exalts G-d. And if the Kaddish marks the sections within the service and a life, what a powerful metaphor! Perhaps prayer is as important as life itself. And since Kaddish whether in the service or the Mourner's Kaddish is recited only when there's a minyan, it shows the importance and power of community, that quorum of ten.

From the President Merrill Griff

We had a wonderful Passover Seder at the Temple this year, with more than 60 people attending. Many thanks to Mark Frydenberg for leading the Seder and to the entire crew who kashered, shopped, prepared, cooked, served and cleaned! Without all of you, the seder would not have been nearly the success that it was.

This is a good lesson for all of us - when we all chip in as a community, great things happen!

Friday Night Services

There will be Friday night services and dinner on May 20th

We Need Minyanaires

Services are held at 7:00am on weekdays (except Tuesday) and at 9:00am on weekends & holidays.

Kaddish

We are not able to guarantee a minyan at each morning service, so if you need a minyan on a particular day to recite Kaddish, please let the Temple know at least 2 days prior.

Thank You

To the Griff Family for making it possible to purchase new furniture for the Brides Room. The sofa and chair from Griff Furniture was purchased with donations in memory of Harris Griff.

A Breakfast on Father's Day and Jews in the Civil War

All are Welcome

Sunday June 19 10:00am

Presented by: David L. Smith, President of the Civil War Round Table of Greater Boston

Mr. Smith, a longtime Waltham resident, will speak in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the very start of the Civil War in 1861. He will speak on Jews who fought on both sides of the Civil War; observing the Jewish holidays during the war; and will share rarely told tales about Jews' challenging lives during the Civil War era.

If your ancestors were in that war, please bring information and photographs.
